

We've all been for so long, talked to about, like, you need to have a career plan.

And I was actually, like, my... I was recently asked to, like, write down some things.

And to me, it just... it became a very funny thing, because you're right. I don't even know what roles are going to exist.

You know, 3 years, 5 years from now, 2 years from now.

There are a lot of, you know, great speculative articles out there about, like, you know, what are the 20 new jobs that are going to exist that do not exist now, because of AI. And so I also think that the learning to learn is so critical

Because it's not just like, hey, you know, you may switch careers, it's that, like, there are going to be things that genuinely have not existed before.
