

Global Accessibility Narrative Video

What does learning without barriers look like?

It looks like possibility.

It looks like progress.

It looks like Pearson.

Because accessibility isn't an afterthought.

"My name is Bruce, and along with our colleagues, it's going to be our job to help you understand the content and concepts for your A and P course."

It's built into our teaching and learning materials.

"Anatomy and physiology are always inseparable. The parts of your body form a well-organized unit."

From the first click to the final grade.

So every learner can engage, understand, and succeed—on their terms.

"I want to meet students where they are. And part of my role is accessibility. And so seeing that the quality of accessibility for ADA compliance and Title 2 compliance is already wrapped in there has really inspired me."

"As a student struggling with dyslexia there are so many platforms on Pearson products that help me to learn better. From text-to-voice to being able to change the font to be able to better read it, all of these things are so crucial for me as a learner."

Accessibility isn't just a feature. It's our responsibility.

Because when learning is accessible, every learner has the chance to reach their potential and thrive.

Empower students to love their journey.

Pearson.
