From: Sofia

Hi,

- 1 I'm Sofia Pérez. I'm fifteen and I come from Colombia. My life is quite unusual because we live near the beach. There aren't many people here, so my family is very important to me.
- 2 Some people think I'm quite shy but, in fact, I'm a confident person. For example, I'm good at making friends.
- 3 We have a lot of horses, so I'm also keen on horse-riding. I usually ride on the beach every morning. Also, it's great having barbecues and we love telling stories in the evenings!
- 4 Choose me because I'm a typical teenager but I live in a very different place. Not many people have this kind of lifestyle these days.

I hope to hear from you!

Sofia

quite and very

We can use quite and very before adjectives. We use very to make an adjective stronger and quite to make an adjective less strong.

He's very funny. I'm quite lazy.

If there is an article (a/an) before the adjective, then very and quite go before the article.

It's a very good film. It was quite an interesting story.

We don't use quite or very with extreme adjectives (e.g. mad, passionate, furious, terrified).
