

Sounds Good

Podcast 46

Mini talks to Todd about her plans after graduation. She wants to join an NGO and gain experience. What is an NGO? Where would Mini like to go to work? What examples does she give of activities done by NGOs or NPOs?

Organizations like Greenpeace, Amnesty International and Doctors without Borders are global NGOs.

Listen again. Match the two parts to complete the sentences from the Podcast.

- |  |   |   |
|--|---|---|
| 1 I would love to create an NGO ...                      | • | • A ... at the university that I teach at.               |
| 2 They can feed their children ...                       | • | • B ... without depending on their husbands.             |
| 3 I want to build my own NGO in my country first and ... | • | • C ... that helps women to build their own enterprises. |
| 4 You are a graduate student ...                         | • | • D ... then spread it to South Asia little by little.   |

NPOs are non-profit organizations. They work in a wide range of areas including the environment, animal protection and health care.

What do you think?

If you were to join an NGO or NPO, who or what would you want to help? Why?

Fun Fact

Traditionally, African bead jewelry carried messages such as whether a person was married or single. Today, this skill is being kept alive and beaded jewelry—like this AIDS awareness badge—is sold to tourists.

