

Bug Club Rights Guide

Bug Club is designed to get children interested in reading for pleasure and therefore reading more!

The Bug Club Family

Bug Club
Guided

Bug Club Guided Reading is centred around books your children want to read. Time saving guided reading cards accompany each of the books and cover multiple sessions that go into depth with each text.

These focus on questions that will challenge and grow your children's comprehension skills. There are also accompanying photocopiable activities to support each title and extend learning.

Bug Club
Independent

Bug Club Independent is an independent reading solution that encourages readers to read at home; over 300 additional fiction and non-fiction print books, comics, and graphic novels alongside an online reading world.

Bug Club
Shared

Bug Club Shared is a new primary reading scheme that uses 36 high-quality books, designed to be read out loud, to encourage excitement around reading for pleasure. With a structured, systematic approach to vocabulary progression, these beautifully illustrated books introduce children to rich and challenging words from other subject areas that enable them to make cross-curricular links in their learning.

It is the winner in the 2020 Teach Primary Awards English category.

Conceived and edited by Julia Donaldson the 48 Plays to Read (specially written by Julia and other top children's authors) each have parts for 6 characters, so are ideal for reading in group. After an initial read-through the children can swap parts round and then perform a rehearsed reading to the rest of the group. In the process they will all become more confident and expressive readers.

The plays also come as e-books so a child can choose their character to read and then all the other parts are read back to them!

MAGAZINES

Real World

Pukka! by Paul Mason

In the 1600s, the first trade ships of the East India Company sailed across the world and reached the shores of the Indian subcontinent. The people who travelled between Britain and India for trade, leisure or to live started centuries of shared history between the two countries.

In India, British people came across a world they had never encountered before: a continent of new names and words. It's not really surprising, then, that the English language is full of words with Indian origins. Let's have a dekko at some – or a look at some, as we'd say without the Hindi word dekha!

There are six words of Indian origin in this passage. Can you spot them all? (To see the answers, turn to page 40.)

We paddled upriver in our dinghy, through thick jungle.

Real World

Home was a subject often on the minds of British people who were overseas. They dreamed of heading back to 'dear old blighty', that very British word for home. Actually, it's from an Urdu word used to describe the travellers to their land: blayati, meaning foreign or English.

But which words might you be more likely to use today? Well, perhaps you had a curry last night, made with mango chutney. We can thank the Tamil and Hindi languages for these words: curry comes from kari in Tamil, and chutney from catni in Hindi, meaning sauce.

At last, we reached a bungalow not far from the bank.

Before bed, you might have taken off your dungees, got into the shower to shampoo your hair, and then put on your pyjamas. In Hindi, dungi is a kind of rough cloth, and chango means press or massage, while pyjama means leg clothing in Urdu.

There are so many English words of Indian origin that a famous dictionary of them was published in 1885 – and it was 1,000 pages long! That really is a pukka fact – which is a word with both Urdu and Hindi roots, literally meaning ready, but usually used to mean genuine or just very good!

I knocked, and James burst onto the veranda.

Thank goodness, it's you – come in! I thought it was them.

Packed with terrific tales, fantastic facts and playful poems!

Real World

Volcano Alert! by Christine Taylor-Butler

What is a volcano?

A volcano is a large opening in Earth's surface. Earth's heat and gases escape from this large opening. Beneath Earth's surface, pressure and heat build up. This melts the rock and minerals. The molten hot rock is called magma. Magma escapes to the surface when a volcano erupts. When magma flows out of a volcano, it is called lava. Lava is dangerously hot.

lava

Real World

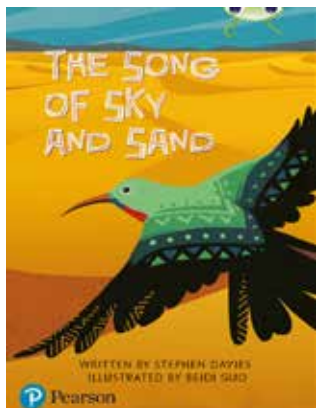

Most volcanoes form over thousands of years.

Did you know?

- Jupiter's moon Io has more active volcanoes than Earth.
- The tallest volcano in the solar system is on Mars.
- The islands of Hawaii are the tops of ocean volcanoes.

Io is slightly larger than Earth's moon and covered with hundreds of volcanoes.
