

^M00:00:03

>> Hello. My name is Nivaldo Tro, and I'm the Pearson Chemistry Author. It has been a challenging spring, and will likely be a challenging fall, as we all try to figure out how to teach our courses in this new environment. Pearson is working with authors like me and subject matter experts to help the transition to online learning that many of us face. We want to help. We're building a variety of pre-built courses with Pearson Premium Digital Learning Products that are designed specifically for online delivery. To maximize online learning, each course includes content, a sample syllabus, lecture Powerpoints, assignments, and assessment components, carefully selected and curated to fit virtual, hybrid and flexible environments. You can simply copy any of these pre-built courses and use them this fall. Once you've copied the course, it's yours to make your own. You can use it directly, modify the dates, or customize it however you wish. We hope you find these pre-built courses useful and wish you the best this fall, as you continue to teach students in whatever environment you find yourself in. Stay safe, and best wishes for your fall classes.

^E00:01:11