

>> You know, I have to admit, a couple weeks ago, I was one of those people who were really nonchalant about COVID-19. I didn't quite see the seriousness of it yet, as it was pretty early on in the stages of the virus here in the United States. But, I'm hoping people have realized or are now realizing the severity of the situation, and it could have drastic consequences on our society and economy and our lives in general. So, please stay home and abide by any mandates set by our government. Wash your hands, and if you are sick, please limit social interactions with anyone around you. If you need medical assistance and are not emergent, please call your health provider before you enter any hospital to avoid putting anybody else at risk. I know that it's really difficult, and it's really inconvenient and it sucks to have your freedom limited, but we have to think about the good of everybody else and the health of everybody else. We have to protect each other. And, the quicker we slow the spread of this virus and the quicker we flatten the curve, the sooner we can get back to our normal, daily lives. Thank you.
