

Lizzie's mum was a gardener and floral arranger. She worked all over town, and their garden was sometimes opened up for tours. On Saturday, when Mum was working on someone's wedding special, Lizzie swooped through the front garden like a whirlwind. She cut long-stemmed lilies and tied them in bunches. Then she set up a stall on the footpath and made a sign: Lilies $5 a bunch. In less than an hour, Lizzie had sold out and $50 warmed her pocket. After dismantling her stall, Lizzie rushed inside and got onto the computer.
