

The next morning, Toby's parents had to go to work but Toby had a holiday from school. "Will you be all right with Babcia today? She might like to go to the shops," said Mum.

Toby went to find his grandmother. She was on the couch in the lounge, looking like a deflated balloon. "Would you like to go to the shops?" asked Toby. Babcia looked at him blankly. Toby tried hard to say it in Polish, but Babcia didn't feel like shopping. She just sighed and shook her head.