Josh writes some sample questions. With Mom's help, he decides on one. He draws a chart to record a tally of people who want to protect the marsh and a tally of people who think houses should be built there.

"What about people who aren't sure yet?" asks Mom.

"Oh yeah," says Josh. He adds a third column.

That night is storytelling night at the community centre. Josh talks to people about his survey. He asks Aunty Nitu about it. She says, “We want to keep Turtle Marsh, but we also need more houses. Why can’t we have both?”

Josh sees that he needs to think more about the problem.
