Icebreakers help people in many ways. They:

- make sure it is safe for ships to move in icy waters
- help when there is flooding
- break out the ice in harbours so that ships can come and go
- help get supplies to places where the only way in and out is by sea
- help scientists who are working in ice-covered places
- can warn other ships about icebergs
- can pull icebergs through the water.

This is an icebreaker near drilling rigs in the Antarctic.
