

Tuesday

Blue Wing Bay / Light air / 18 knots

Distance Travelled – 300 nautical miles

This morning, we anchored at Blue Wing Bay on Butterfly Island. The ship's crew launched lifeboats so we could get to the shore. It was the Butterfly Festival. This is an event which celebrates the hatching of thousands of butterflies. We followed the Butterfly Parade. It began in the thick jungle forest where the eggs hatch, and went down the path to the village. Butterflies were everywhere – their wings glittered against the clear blue sky. In the parade, people were dressed as butterflies. The highlight of the day was the Butterfly Feast. All the food was made in the shape and colours of butterflies.

