

Some Aborigines are experts at tracking people or animals. They look at things such as broken branches or tracks on the ground. They can tell how big an animal is by how deep the tracks are. They can tell what made the tracks and when the tracks were made.

This man is a tracker. He can see footprints on the ground.

Dingo footprint

Sample pages