

Array's Bakery

Tillie Golsof and G. E. Park

At 6:30 in the morning, Array turns on the lights in his bakery. He goes back to the kitchen and brings out trays and trays of his fresh baking. He fills the front window. He fills the shelves. He fills the glass case.

Array checks to make sure that his baking is in straight equal rows. He nods his head and smiles. Everything is ready.

At 7:00, Array flips over the OPEN sign and welcomes his first customer.

